They did this by placing her on the back of a dolphin. To a renaissance eye the dolphin symbolised speed...Fortune standing on a dolphin's back was a reminder to the reader that opportunity passes in a flash...The moral was one likely to appeal to men of action, aristocrats and businessmen rather than to churchmen or lawyers. The emblem is most often found in Italy on bindings from Venice, with its great mercantile interests, and from Bologna and Padua."), 174 ("the leading Venetian craftsman, the 'Mendoza Binder'"), 260 (On the Paduan shop: "Their business consisted principally in selling bound copies of the classics to foreign students. Figures of Fortune or Cupid or both were popular with their clients."); Curt F. Bühler, "The Binding of Books Printed by William Caxton," Early Books and Manuscripts (1973), p. 76 (on the early appearance of trade bindings: "While it is nevertheless probable that the bigger houses often sold their books in sheets, it is equally certain that some form of 'edition' binding was known in the fifteenth century; it is only reasonable to suppose that the smaller printers—having few or no representatives to retail their publications—probably sold their copies bound at the printing office."); Mirjam M. From France the technique reached England where the earliest examples date from 1519 and the early 1520s."); Anthony Hobson, "Was There an Aldine Bindery?" Aldus Manutius and Renaissance Culture (1998), p. 243-244 (on the Mendoza Binder, but germane to trade bindings generally: "His typical trade binding is decorated with a rectangular frame of one gilt and multiple blind lines, rosettes and ivy-leaves at the corners and a smaller leaf between them, either in silver or in blind. The title and often the customer's initials are gilt on the upper cover. These are bindings made either for a bookseller's stock or a bookseller's customer. Binders in Venice were not allowed by the booksellers' guild to sell books directly to the public."); Anthony Hobson, Renaissance Book Collecting (Cambridge Univ, 1999), p. 35 (knotwork tool), 99 (on the Mendoza Binder: "The characteristic work of this craftsman is to be seen on bindings with standard decorative schemes, made either for display and sale in the bookshop employing him or to be ordered through it") ¶ Similar bindings with Cupid and/or Fortune: Mirjam Foot, Henry Davis Gift, v. 3, #250; Hobson, Renaissance, p. 98 ¶ Similar bindings without Cupid and/or Fortune: Davis, v. 3, #262 (Mendoza), #297 (Fugger), #298 (Fugger); Anthony Hobson, "Italian 16th-century Bindings," Italian and French 16th-century Bookbindings (1991), #9 (Fugger); Fine and Historic Bookbindings from the Folger Shakespeare Library (1992), #12.2 (Mendoza, "the leading binder in Venice in the period 1530-1555. To supplement, harness the power of subdivisions!

—Bibliography

H 1095; H 1105; H 1110; H 1156; H 1160

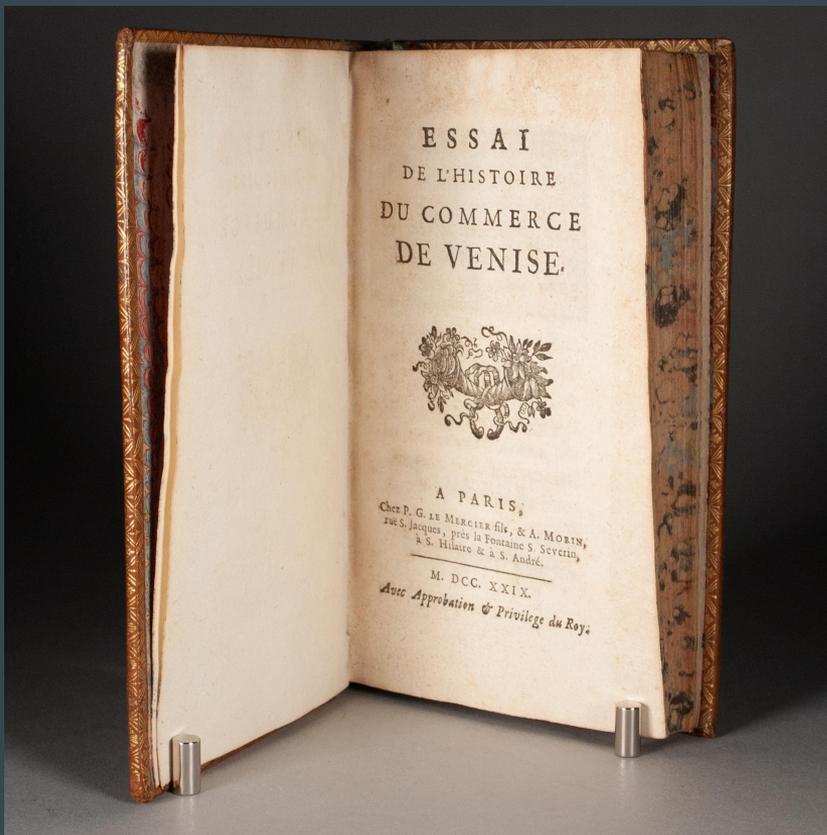

Use as a form subdivision under subjects for works consisting of bibliographies about the subject. Use under names of individual persons and corporate bodies for lists of works by or about the person or corporate body.

UF — Bibliographies

List of LC subdivisions: <https://www.loc.gov/aba/publications/FreeLCSH/SUBDIVISIONS.pdf>

You can use the Library of Congress authorities site to find the proper heading: <https://authorities.loc.gov/webvoy.htm>

Unleash the awesome power of subdivisions

You might find what you're looking for without understanding LC subdivisions, but your success and efficiency will improve with some basic skills

LC subdivisions can help you...

- Find books on similar topics
- Place your book in a given topic's chronology
- See what similar material exists at specific libraries

The fundamental trick is to map the descriptive subject words in your head to those in the LC Authority File:

<https://authorities.loc.gov>

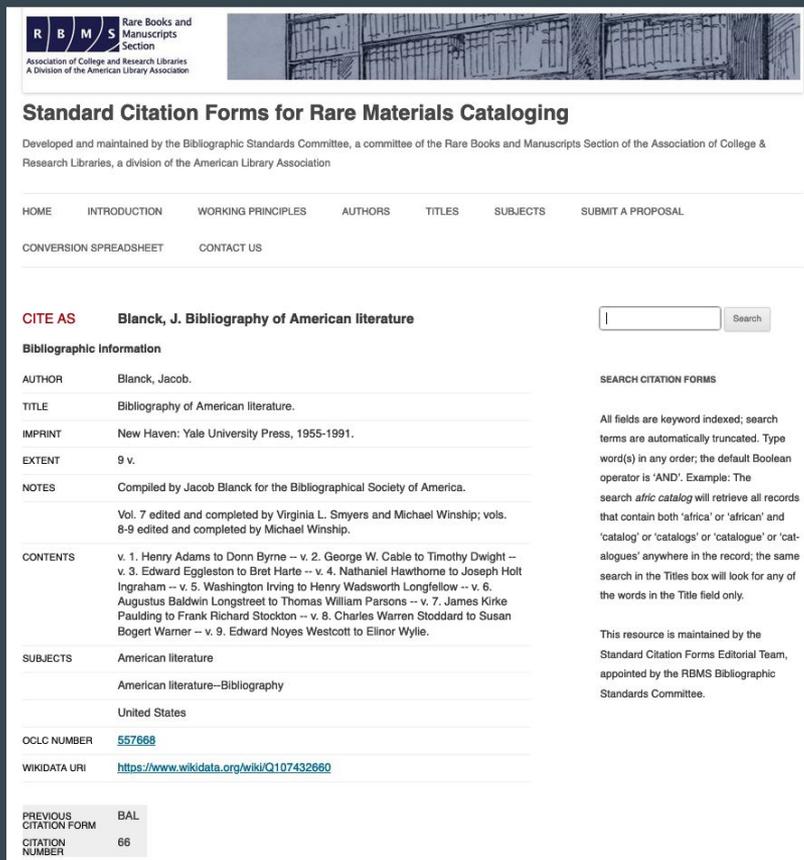

Browsing subdivisions may help:

Standard Citation Forms

The screenshot shows the website for Standard Citation Forms for Rare Materials Cataloging. At the top left is the RBMS logo (Rare Books and Manuscripts Section, Association of College and Research Libraries, A Division of the American Library Association) and a sketch of a library building. The main heading is "Standard Citation Forms for Rare Materials Cataloging". Below this is a navigation menu with links: HOME, INTRODUCTION, WORKING PRINCIPLES, AUTHORS, TITLES, SUBJECTS, SUBMIT A PROPOSAL, CONVERSION SPREADSHEET, and CONTACT US. The main content area features a search bar with the text "CITE AS Blanck, J. Bibliography of American literature" and a search button. Below the search bar is a table of bibliographic information for the work "Bibliography of American literature." by Jacob Blanck. The table includes fields for AUTHOR, TITLE, IMPRINT, EXTENT, NOTES, CONTENTS, SUBJECTS, OCLC NUMBER, WIKIDATA URI, PREVIOUS CITATION FORM, and CITATION NUMBER. To the right of the table is a "SEARCH CITATION FORMS" section with a text box and a search button, and a paragraph explaining that all fields are keyword indexed and search terms are automatically truncated. At the bottom left, there is a "PREVIOUS CITATION FORM" section with a button labeled "BAL" and the citation number "66".

Especially useful for:

- Quickly identifying standard bibliographies referred to by common short titles
- Browsing useful bibliographies—it's like a convenient, peer-reviewed list of standard bibliographies
- Locating authorized subject headings you can use in WorldCat searches

Note the “Previous Citation Form” at bottom, which is searchable from the main page

Virtual International Authority File (VIAF)

(viaf.org)

A massive database of national authority record databases

Its predictive search default can help identify individuals from incomplete names

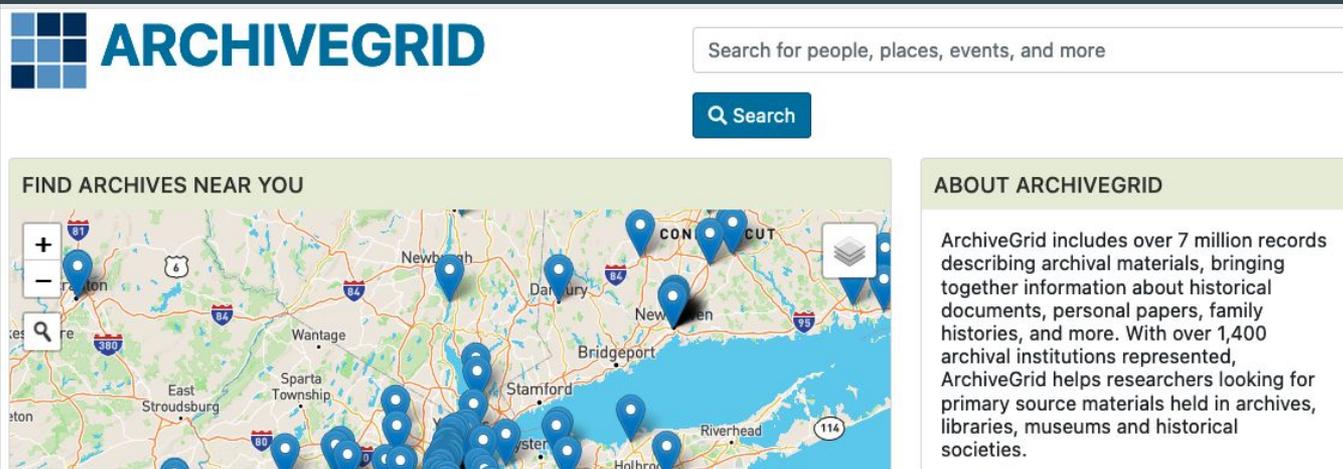

And each record is a trove of useful information

- Business addresses—useful for differentiating printers with common names
- Full names—useful to fully identify those referred to simply as “widow of” in imprints
- Titles associated with the individual—useful for sorting out unclear authorship
- Further reference sources—because catalogers are typically required to cite their sources

An attendee asked about the CERL Thesaurus: <https://data.cerl.org/thesaurus/>

- For early book people, it's definitely worth bookmarking, likewise CERL's other resources
- It draws on many (but not all) of the same sources as VIAF and is limited to roughly pre-1850 subjects — so it won't cover more recent owners and binders, for example
- But it has a cleaner interface and is certainly better for searching geographic place names

Finding archives and manuscript material

Archive Grid is a huge database of archival collections—heavily US, but global in coverage

Explore other catalogs, which may have similar functionality

The screenshot shows the CCfr website interface. At the top left is the BnF logo and the text "Catalogue collectif de France". To the right is a user account icon and the text "Mon compte CCfr". Further right are navigation links: "À propos", "Actualités", "Contact", and "Aide". Below the header is a navigation bar with "LES CATALOGUES" and "LE RÉPERTOIRE". On the right side of the navigation bar are "Panier" and "Recherches récentes". Below the navigation bar is a search section with "RECHERCHE RAPIDE" and a search box containing the placeholder text "Titre, Auteur, Année...". To the right of the search box are icons for "RECHERCHES AVANÇÉES". Below the search section are four search categories: "Imprimés multimédia", "Base Patrimoine", "Manuscrits et Archives" (highlighted with a red box), and "Sources musicales".
